REPORT

OF THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE OF WEST CAMBRIDGE,

FOR 1854-5.

In making up the Report of the School Committee for the past year, we shall aim to present to the inhabitants of the town as clear a statement as possible of the condition of the schools at the present time, and the progress that has been made. We shall endeavor to fill our report with what facts and statistics we have been able to gather, as evidence of the manner in which the Committee, and those placed in charge as teachers of your children, have fulfilled their several duties.

We are perfectly aware that it is unnecessary at this day, to plead the cause of education. It is equally unnecessary to press upon your attention the great utility of our public schools. These matters you all understand and appreciate. You are willing to tax yourselves largely and freely for the education of the young; you are willing and desirous to make education free and open to all, without cost to the child, so that the son or daughter of the poorest man in the community may derive as much benefit from our public schools as the children of the wealthiest tax-payer among you. All you ask is, that the money raised for the support of schools shall be judiciously and properly expended, so as to produce the best and largest results. You ask of your Committee to report to you the manner in which the schools have been conducted, and the profit derived from the generous provisions made by the town. In the following pages, according to the best of our ability, we give you the desired information, beginning with the

CENTRE DISTRICT.

At the commencement of last year, the charge of the Grammar School went into the hands of Mr. C. L. Washburn, a young man educated at one of our State Normal Schools for the profession of teaching. He came here with good recommendations as to character and success as a teacher, and your Committee believe they have not been disappointed in the choice made. When Mr. Washburn took the school, from a series of previous disasters and disappointments, it was in a low and disordered condition. It had lost its confidence and courage. But we are happy to state that, through the skill, energy and industry of the present teacher, aided by a ready co-operation of his pupils, the school, in one short year, has risen, in many points of excellence, to a condition never enjoyed before.

Many sound and valuable improvements have been made. The Committee have been much gratified to witness the change that has taken place within the school-room in regard to order, promptitude and studious deportment. We wish we could speak as favorably of the out-door conduct of the members of this school. Complaints have reached us in regard to rudeness on the part of the boys, while engaged in their sports and recreations around the building and in the streets. We are sorry for the reputation of the school to hear any such reports, and should not speak of them here, were it not with the hope of their immediate correction thereby. We regard the character as dearly as we do the reputation of the scholars; and are of the opinion that no intellectual brilliancy, or attainments of scholarship, can excuse or compensate for rudeness to strangers, or the invasion of others' rights. This is an unpleasant matter to allude to in a report to be made public, and we trust the occasion for it will not occur again.

The school has been well attended during the year, and an unusual interest manifested in the various studies pursued. Especially has great attention been paid to Geography and Arithmetic. The teacher has aimed to instruct by giving the plain and comprehensible principles on which a thorough knowledge of the subjects in hand are founded. After a pupil knows the principle of a thing, he can easily understand the facts: he can understand a rule in Arithmetic after he sees the principle and the reason for it. The principles of map-drawing have been taught, and the scholars, who have given their attention to it, have made remarkable progress, giving us, at the examination, some fine specimens of outline maps drawn upon the blackboard. In other branches, such as History, Philosophy, Physiology, Book-keeping, Grammar, Punctuation, fair progress has been made. In Mental Arithmetic, the smaller classes were somewhat deficient. In the reading there is also some deficiency as to style and manner. There is a stiff declamatory tone — a want of flexibility of voice, manifested in the older scholars, that ought to be abandoned. But in these respects we have witnessed some improvement for the past year. We have only to add that the school has been well and ably taught, and is now in a prosperous and satisfactory condition.

The Primary School in this district has been in charge of Miss L. C. Tucker, a teacher of such well known abilities and success, as to need no praise at our hands. Her school comprises the usual studies of the primary department. It is the duty of the teachers in this department, to take children upon their first entrance, and fit them for the next grade. They are transferred to the Grammar School by qualification and not by age or size. Our standard of qualification for the upper school comprises Mental Arithmetic, Elementary Geography, Reading and Spelling plain English, and other little, but necessary subjects found in the spelling book. When these are gone through with in a thorough manner, and the children are able to take more advanced studies and go on with them in classes, we deem them fitted for removal to the Grammar School. We make this statement here, because some, who never visit the schools, complain of our method of transference from one to the other. We are aware that, in this school in particular, quite a number of children were sent up a year ago, too young, and at an unusual time. We think it was an injury to the scholars thus transferred; but it was done by a former member of the board, without the concurrence of his associates.

The school for the past year has gone on pleasantly and prosperously, and notwithstanding it was suspended a short time in the winter, on account of sickness, and for a number of weeks was thin in attendance, it passed a creditable and satisfactory examination. The school is in good hands, is advancing rapidly, and the parents have reason to rejoice that their children are under the management of one who takes so much pains, not only to instruct them properly, but to cultivate within them amiable feelings and gentle manners.

NORTH-WEST DISTRICT.

The Grammar School in this part of the town has been under the tuition of the present incumbent, Mr. Silas Peabody. During the time Mr. Peabody has had charge of this school, it has gone on increasing every term, and every year, in interest and character. The district has been very fortunate in retaining his services for so long a time. He devotes his time and energies wholly to his profession, and we see the stamp of his mind and force of character in the conduct and ability of his pupils. This school, for the year past, has maintained a high rank, embracing studies and exercises scarcely inferior to those found in High Schools and Academies. One cause of its prosperity is, that the scholars in this district have remained in school until they are old enough to appreciate the worth and advantages of education, and able to go beyond the mere preliminaries of the District School. For thorough culture and solid attainments, we believe there are no scholars in town, whether educated at private schools or in the city, that are in advance of those in this district. This school, in fact, embraces nearly all the studies and branches found in a High School. At the annual examination, there were classes which acquitted themselves with great credit in Ackley's Algebra, performing and explaining the most difficult examples; in the study of Euclid, through the seventh book; in Astronomy, in Natural Philosophy, in Greenleaf's Arithmetic; in Geography, Physiology, Reading, Writing, and Mental Arithmetic. In Geography and Arithmetic this school excels. The pupils are thoroughly drilled in principles, and know all they pretend. The examination gave great satisfaction. The younger as well as the older scholars have had due share of attention, and so far as we can judge there has been no cause of complaint on the part of any member of the district.

Mr. Peabody, during the winter term, has had the assistance of two of his older pupils, Miss Locke, and Miss Farmer, and the classes in their care have been well instructed.

The Primary School was commenced by Miss Adeline A. Foster, but by her resignation, about the middle of the first term, it passed, by the election of the Committee, into the care of Miss Mary C. Hill, a young lady belonging in the district, who had had some experience in teaching. The school here is quite large, and has always been rather difficult to manage and govern. It is probably the most difficult in some respects of any school in town. There is a large number of bright and amiable children in this district, whose parents take all necessary pains to make them what they ought to be at home and in school; but there are many others, who do not seem to manifest much domestic care or training; consequently they make trouble, and cause the teacher much anxiety and labor.

Owing to the size of this department and the cause above mentioned, the Committee, at different times during the year, have taken occasion to send into the Grammar School quite a number of Miss Hill's scholars, and some of them perhaps a little deficient in qualification. This has more nearly equalized the two departments, and has proved beneficial both to those taken out and those left behind.

Miss Hill is a young teacher, but is earnest, industrious and anxious to instruct and improve her pupils. We believe she has spared no pains to discharge her duty. She possesses many excellent qualities for a teacher. Her amiable disposition, combined with little more firmness and experience, will, we believe, make her perfectly successful in her profession. Considering the fact of so recent a change of teachers, which almost always retards a school's progress for the time being; and also that the numbers have been large and the scholars young, the examination, at the close, was very creditable, and more than met the expectations of the Committee.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

The Grammar School has been under the care of Mr. C. J. Frost. This school has numbered about the same as in former years, but has not had in attendance so many large and advanced scholars. Consequently, there has been some falling off in the higher branches of study. But still the school has sustained a high rank, embracing classes in French, Latin, Algebra, Geometry, Physiology, Philosophy, Arithmetic, Geography, Grammar and History. All these branches have been pursued with credit to the pupils. They have mastered their text-books so far as they have gone. They have, perhaps, been confined too closely to the text-books, and have not made themselves so familiar as they ought with general principles. They have not learned to apply their book-knowledge to practical and general subjects — are unable to illustrate cleary, and explain the principles on which the conclusions in the book are founded.

This was found to be the case in Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, and some one or two other branches. In Reading, the school has improved; in Mental Arithmetic also. The compositions read at the examinations were also very creditable, some of them evincing a degree of excellence hardly to be expected in scholars so young.

At the close of the examination, Mr. Frost, who has been the teacher here for eleven years, with much feeling gave the Committee his resignation, having that day been appointed to the High School at Concord. Both scholars and parents part with Mr. Frost with deep regret. He has labored diligently in his profession, has done much good in the district, is a man of high and pure aims, and we wish him success and happiness in his new field of labor.

The Primary School is still taught by Miss A. A. Douglas. Previous reports have spoken of Miss Douglas' qualifications as a teacher, and we have only to say that her success the past year justifies all that has been said.

The district is fortunate in enjoying her services for so long a time. Her school presents a good appearance — is well taught, and the teacher takes much pains to instil into the minds of her pupils principles of virtue, amiability and self-respect. The whole district is fortunately situated in this respect; being remote from a thick settled village, and those influences which tend to attract the mind from study, the children escape many temptations which surround others, and plunge them into folly and indiscretion.

Miss Douglas' department comprises the usual studies of the Primary school. The children have made good progress, and passed a very excellent examination in almost every branch. The classes in Reading and Geography did remarkably well. The school is in good and competent hands, and we believe fully meets the wants and expectations of the parents, as it does the approbation of the Committee.

EAST DISTRICT.

We have now but one school more to report, and that is the Primary School in this district, now under the charge of Miss S. M. Chase. The first term of the year was kept by Miss H. C. Robinson, the former teacher. She resigned, and Miss Harriett S. Hill was elected to fill the vacancy. Miss Hill remained as teacher but one term, during which time the school was prosperous, and her labors perfectly satisfactory to all.

But, for reasons relating to her own interests, she resigned in the fall, leaving the school, for the second time in the year, without an instructor. Miss S. M. Chase, the present incumbent, was elected to the situation.

Of course it is to be expected that the school has suffered some disadvantage from such a succession of changes. Sometimes changes occur that are beneficial — as when a school passes from the hands of a poor, into those of a good teacher. But frequent changes from one teacher to another of equal ability and fitness, cannot be otherwise than deleterious to the progress of the school. It has been the peculiar lot of this district to suffer in this particular. But we trust their day of suffering is about over, and that henceforth they will enjoy the benefits of a competent and constant teacher. Miss Chase is well qualified for her situation, and possesses those natural gifts which enable her to win the love, and command the respect of her pupils. She is earnest in the discharge of her duties, and we think is fully entitled to the confidence and cordiality of the district.

We have thus given you a brief outline of the condition of our several schools. Under the existing system we believe they have been as prosperous and as well conducted the past, as any year previous. We have had good and faithful teachers; the attendance has been pretty constant and punctual, and there seems to have been a desire on the part of the pupils of the several schools to advance and improve all they could. Quite a number who have been members of these schools felt that this would be their last year as scholars, and they have labored accordingly. They have left school but with the feeling that their education and knowledge are not at all inferior to that of others of their age, acquired at private and more fashionable institutions. Our school system is not very perfect in this town, — our school houses are not the most commodious, yet the children of our common schools are as well educated, and as far advanced, as most any others in the Commonwealth. There are but few towns in the State that pay more per scholar than we do. We are the 15th on the list out of 328 towns paying for the education of each child $7.25 per year, exclusive of private funds which if added to the amount raised by tax, would place us about the 5th town in the state. We believe that, with this liberal expenditure, we ought to have better accomodation for our schools, for some of them at least. About $500 were expended last year in the North-West District to remodel and repair the Grammar School-room. It is now a pleasant and beautiful room. But the Primary School-rooms in that and all the other districts need the same. The young children need easy seats and a pleasant room, as much as the older ones, and even more so.

There is another matter to which we must call your attention and that is, the subject of Intermediate Schools. We need certainly two Intermediate Schools; one in the Centre and the other in the North-West District. In one of these schools an assistant is employed all the time; in the other, during the winter term only; but there are children enough in both departments to employ a third teacher all the time.

These school-rooms are all unfit for an assistant; there are no suitable apartments for recitation. The classes must be taken into a little dressing-room or closet where they are cramped and stifled. What we need, is a third room of sufficient dimensions for an intermediate department. It would cost no more for teaching than it does now — the only expense would be the building or fitting-up of a new room, and we think the Town ought to consider this matter and have it attended to immediately. Towns around us have done the same long ago, and we should not hesitate any longer to follow their example, and thus increase the facilities of learning, and save our own schools from further trouble in this matter.

One year ago the School Committee asked for more money to spend for schools, and the sum of $300 additional was freely granted. That sum was used to increase the pay of the teachers, both male and female. This we believed to be but an act of justice to them; and we still believe that the compensation of the female teachers is too small. They do not receive a fair proportion of wages for the work they do. We hope sometime to be able to pay such prices to all our teachers, as to prevent their being called away by the more generous offers of other towns.

The following figures will show what has been paid for teaching in each district.

REPORT

SCHOOL COMMITTEE OF WEST CAMBRIDGE,

FOR 1855-6.

CENTRE SCHOOL.

This School is not in a prosperous condition. There is good order, good recitations, and on the part of most of the pupils very good progress. Mr. Charles L. Washburn's method of teaching, makes thorough scholars in such branches as are studied here. In his first class there are some of the best scholars in town, and many, whose only experience in a Grammar School has been under his charge, have made excellent progress. There are no better Geography classes, no better Readers, in short, in every study his pupils show persevering and successful instruction. The Committee have confidence in his ability, and wish they could say that the state of the school answered their expectations. What we miss in this school-room, where everything seems so orderly, is, what we will call, for want of a better expression, its humanities. Some of the pupils are too often obstinately obedient, and manifest too little love for teacher, classmates, or anybody else. They seldom sing, although the teacher has been often kindly requested to make this beautiful art a frequent exercise. We cannot help thinking that there would be a more regular and full attendance in this, the largest district in town, could there be a manifestation of more affectionate confidence and real interest, with less will, on the part of teacher and pupils.

Miss Jennison, the assistant in this school, has been faithful to her charge, and her works do praise her. We regret that her ill health obliged her to resign the situation. She is now suffering from the effects of a legal, and very common system of slow poisoning, to which the accumulated wisdom of the ninteenth century subjects the great majority of Young America in the school-room. Breathing an atmosphere charged with the gasses generated in twenty or thirty pairs of active lungs, the life of it burned out by the red hot sides of a cylinder stove, and occasionally revivified by a torrent of out-of-doors air through an open window, tempered with snow flakes or below zero, will in time affect the toughest nature. Miss Harriet Blake succeeded Miss Jennison, and is doing the district good service. She is a good teacher, and her pupils cannot fail to progress.

CENTRE PRIMARY SCHOOL.

In this school there has been no change of teacher. Miss L. C. Tucker is an admirable instructor of children. While she takes charge of the school, it will, without doubt, remain one of the best conducted Primary Schools in the region about. We must, however, remind the parents in this district of the fact that she is mortal, and cannot well do more than forty things at once; and we would respectfully suggest to those who so pertinaciously insist upon making her their nursery maid, by sending in their "wee bit todlings" of all ages below four and a half years, the propriety and fairness of providing them with cot beds and candy. It is difficult to understand how she can find time to look after the comfort of "those tired little feet," during the long warm summer afternoons, where accomodations for a nap are so scanty, and yet so bravely do her duty by the older children.

NORTH-WEST DISTRICT.

This school is unlike any other in town. It is an excellent illustration of the importance of ambition and skill in the teacher. The town is under great obligations to Mr. Peabody for the excellent condition this school has been kept in for several years. He has infused into the school an ambition and refinement that places his first classes among the best in any town school in the State. Many children have come under his care, indifferent themselves, and whose parents never enter the school-room, who in a little while have learned to know how much they can do, and have soon taken a stand among the best in the school. In this district there are too many who think that if their children can "read, write and cipher," it is all they need know of books, and that all knowledge more than of these, is acquired at a total loss of time. We cannot here "reason together" upon the wisdom or folly of their conclusions, but will only say that the free expression of such sentiments, by the parents, takes from the heart of the child all desire to do well and labor diligently, and hangs to the teacher's energies a drag that wearies and discourages his most earnest endeavors.

NORTH-WEST DISTRICT PRIMARY SCHOOL.

Here again we have been fortunate in not being obliged to change teachers. Miss Mary C. Hill, assisted by her sisters, Adeline and Henrietta, during different terms, has continued the school through the year in a manner acceptable to all interested. This is a very large school and taxes the strength and patience of the teachers most severely. Here, as in the Centre District, we have a room filled with fine active children, packed as closely together, and treated much in the same manner as hams in a smoke house, so far as ventilation and space are concerned. The little room into which twenty-five or more are often crowded for recitation, and which would be in use through all the hours of school, were it possible for the assistant to remain in it, is about four feet wide and ten long, without other ventilation than the door which opens into the school-room, which must be closed during exercises. After being occupied half an hour the air of the room becomes so impure, that no one can continue to breath it without being sick. This school should have larger and more commodious rooms. It has good teachers and is made up of agreeable and intelligent children. They deserve better accomodations.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

This School is somewhat peculiar. There is no trouble here, no fault-finding, at least, so far as the Committee are informed; no children abused; no partiality; no negligence on the part of the Teacher; no intrusion of the scholars upon angry neighbors; no running the gaunlet in passing the school-house in sleighing time. The district has seemed pleased with the school, and the teacher has been pleased with his pupils.

Mr. W. Fisk Gile, who has been the instructor the most of the year, has been earnest and successful in the discharge of his duties. The members of the district, by their generous contributions, have furnished the school-room with a beautiful cabinet of philosophical apparatus, at an expense of more than two hundred dollars. Such manifestations of interest are assurances of the right state of things. People do not give money where they have no interest in the use to which it is appropriated. Mr. Gile resigned in February, and was succeeded by Mr. R. C. Hardy, whose well established reputation as an excellent teacher, and an agreeable, honorable man, secures to him the utmost confidence and respect of the Committee.

SOUTH DISTRICT PRIMARY SCHOOL.

It is a pleasure to speak of this school. Under the management of Miss Amelia Douglass, it has ever been one of the best schools in town. Pretty, intelligent children, a spacious, cheerful room, and a kind-natured, skillful instructor, are certainly the essentials present here. Everything goes on harmoniously, and everybody seems to be satisfied and pleased.

EAST DISTRICT PRIMARY SCHOOL.

This fine little Primary School has continued under the charge of Miss S. Miranda Chase, and we most heartily continue to her the commendations of last year. Her earnest, kindly efforts to benefit the children, and their obedient, affectionate response, together with the hearty good will and steady encouragement manifested by the parents towards both, have done much towards realizing the pleasant relationship which should ever exist between the teacher and the members of the district. The last term was much broken up by severe weather. The drifting snow storms, the exposed situation of the school-house, and the tender age of many of the children, made going to school a very dangerous undertaking many times during the past cold winter; but where the teacher, the pupils and the parents are willing each to help the other, there must always be advancement. At all the visits of the Committee and at the final examination, it was evident that the teacher knew how to do her duty, and was willing and able to do it.

She has resigned her situation very much to the regret of all interested in the school, and retires with the respect and kind wishes of those whom she has most faithfully served.

There were in town on the 1st of April, 1855, 387 children between the ages of five and fifteen years, 287 children under five years of age.

Does not the large number of this younger class indicate the absolute necessity of providing more room soon?

Upon presenting to the people of West Cambridge a report upon the condition of the public schools, it seems proper to suggest to them such alterations and improvements as have appeared to be desirable in their arrangements. There can be no doubt that if all who are desirous of making these institutions as useful and profitable as they are capable of being made, even with the same outlay of money, should come together and patiently look into the subject, there would soon be a state of things over which the hearts of true men would rejoice. They would become interested in them, and feel something more than is manifested by the mere assent to an appropriation for their support on town-meeting day. They would realize more vividly the obligations they themselves should acknowledge for mental habits and wealth they have derived from them. To most of us these public schools have been the benefactors that have placed in our possession the means of starting fairly in the race of active life. Many, very many, have had nothing else to look to for the knowledge that gives them courage and confidence in their own capacity.

If we cannot have a high school, then the recommendation of the last school report should be adopted.

There should be intermediate schools established in the Centre and North-West Districts, or what would answer as well, the houses should be made large enough to give convenient and well-ventilated recitation rooms. This want of space and fresh air is the great want of our schools. Our teachers have been competent and active, and there is a set of pupils in all the districts who are willing to do credit to their instructions. They have not fallen behind our expectations, but they are capable of doing better, and would do better were they well supplied with that elastic, buoyant vitality derived from well-ventilated blood.

A bountiful God has stretched out space into infinity, and piled up the sweet atmosphere to the stars, yet we allowance our children in both, by dealing out to them most stingily what is given to them without measure.

There is no danger whatever that our children will not learn fast enough, but there is great danger that they will not grow fast enough.

Their minds are cultivated with much more care than their bodies, and we are too forgetful of looking for well developed, cheerful boys and girls, while praising and encouraging the mental vigor of precocious prodiges. A healthy boy at fourteen who can shoulder a bushel of corn, or swim a half mile, or a robust, warm-blooded girl who can laugh heartily, run, jump rope, and work without the "side ache," affords surer hopes of a happy life and future worth, than to be feeble and nervous, and able to demonstrate every geometrical problem ever known, and read, in a dozen obsolete languages, all the old Mythology ever written or dreamed.

In the education of our children, we are looking too much for immediate effect; and in ministering to their comforts and bodily welfare, we overlook our short comings and follies, because there is no change at once in their condition for the worse. Yet they surely are silently and always progressing towards a vigorous bodily and intellectual maturity, or receding to become weak and dependent beings. If we could all of us more fully understand the terrible significance of this great truth, "The sins of the parents shall be visited upon the children, even to the third and fourth generation," we should lay aside some of our indifference and superstition, and realize the physical to be as excellent and worthy of culture and as essential to our true growth and happiness as the mental and spiritual.

If our common schools, as they are conducted, especially in cities and large towns, must necessarily be instrumental in deteriorating the development of the race, as they often do by the close confinement and overtasking to which children are subjected, their good effect may well be doubted. The physical energy and common sense of one broad-chested young man from the old-fashioned, wood-warmed, well ventilated schoolhouse in the back woods, whose stock of town-and-state-paid education enables him only to "read, write and cipher," will often carry him through more useful and difficult enterprises than would swamp a score of more learned but puny and effeminate beings. Those men and women are best educated who can best perform the duties of life, in whatever capacity they may be obliged to act, and there are few positions where health and strengh do not conduce as much to that end as mental acquirements. It is as essential that children play as that they study; and while so much is being done to secure a proper regulation and attention to the one, we leave them to originate and conduct their sports as they can and where they can. The streets are their play-ground, and the shops and public highway their rendezvous.

How can we wonder that they are so often saucy and old beyond their years in bad habits.

The fault is not theirs, and they must be visited, sometimes with suffering, for the sins of their elders. No parent has a moral right to be habitually so involved in business or pleasure, as not to know how and where the hours of play are occupied; for a more rapid and permanent process of education is going on at such times, than in any school to which they are obliged to resort. Every school house should have connected with it a spacious and pleasant play-ground, that should be kept neat and made attractive. This ground should be furnished with swings, stands for jumping, conveniences for cricket, goold, football, and whatever else will best promote health and cheerfulness. Could the parents themselves, be induced occasionally to play with their children, and forget the formal conventionalism of grown up society, their hearts might perhaps be refreshed and made better by such fellowship with what, in its purity and innocence, we are assured, is like the Kingdom of Heaven.

The town of West Cambridge ought to be the banner town of the State for excellent schools. There is wealth enough, and it is most generously bestowed when it is needed and applied for. It is behind but few, and would be at the head, could we bring the same practical good sense to bear upon this subject that would at once be bestowed upon any scheme of money-making of half the importance. But alas! receiving quick returns in ready cash, claims, and perhaps will always claim, our first and most earnest interest; while paying heavy taxes for future good and the public welfare, meets with comparative indifference. Could the money expended for private instruction and the expenses incidental thereto, be kept in town and applied to the support of a High School, there would be enough, without another cent from taxation, to establish and carry on such an institution, without diminishing the number of schools already in operation. The territorial size and shape of the town would bring every corner within fair walking distance of any central location that might be chosen.

There would then be no necessity for intermediate schools, which are now much needed, and which must be provided before long, and it will cost as much, or nearly as much, to enlarge the two school houses, or build new ones for their accommodation, as to put up a building for the High School.
